UNITED STATES' RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT
SPRINGER'S MOTION FOR STAY OF EXECUTION OF SENTENCE AND RELEASE PENDING APPEAL (DOC. NO. 339)

The United States of America, by and through its attorneys, Thomas Scott Woodward, United States Attorney for the Northern District of Oklahoma and Kenneth P. Snoke, Assistant United States Attorney, and Charles A. O'Reilly, Special Assistant United States Attorney, hereby responds in opposition to Defendant Springer's Motion for Stay of Execution of Sentence and Release Pending Appeal (doc. no. 339) (hereinafter Defendant's Motion for Release), pursuant to Title 18, United States Code Sections 3143(b) and 3145(c) (exceptional circumstances), Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 8(1)(A), and Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 38(b). At the sentencing hearing, the Court appropriately considered Defendant's assertions and the factors pursuant to Sections 3143(b), and correctly determined that Defendant should be detained.

I. DEFENDANT IS A FLIGHT RISK AND PRESENTS A DANGER TO THE COMMUNITY

On April 23, 2010, the Court sentenced Defendant to fifteen years imprisonment and ordered Defendant detained. Defendant asserts that he “is not likely to flee,” and that “[t]he evidence is clear and convincing Springer poses no risk of fleeing.” Defendant’s Motion for Release at 3. Defendant’s self-serving statements notwithstanding, the Court has determined otherwise. In deciding to detain Defendant, the Court found that given the changed circumstances, specifically the fifteen year sentence of imprisonment, Defendant could not establish by clear and convincing evidence that he was not a flight risk. As another district court stated in detaining a defendant convicted of willful failure to file tax returns, “Defendant’s situation has changed since sentence was imposed . . . Malquist now faces a substantial prison term. He also refuses to accept the fact that he has violated the law. Malquist continues to adhere to his belief that he is not, and was not, obligated to file federal income tax returns reporting his financial and tax status to the government.” United States v. Malquist, 619 F.Supp. 875, 878 (D.Mont. 1985). Of note is the fact that the defendant in Malquist only faced a term of incarceration of four years. Defendant faces fifteen years imprisonment.

Defendant’s additional assertion that he “clearly and unmistakably is not likely to pose a danger to the safety of any other person or the community in which he lives” is also incorrect. As the Court clearly articulated in sentencing Defendant, and previously in fashioning the terms and conditions of Defendant’s release pending sentencing, Defendant poses a significant financial threat to the community. Therefore, Defendant has not, and cannot, establish by clear and convincing evidence that “he is not likely to flee or pose a danger to the safety of any person or the community” if released.

II. THERE IS NO SUBSTANTIAL QUESTION OF LAW OR FACT LIKELY TO RESULT IN REVERSAL OR AN ORDER FOR A NEW TRIAL

Prior to the Bail Reform Act of 1984 (18 U.S.C.A. § 3143(b)(2)), there was a presumption in favor of releasing persons, convicted of federal crimes, on bail pending appeal and that, if detention were to be ordered, the burden was on the government to show that the appeal was frivolous or taken for delay. United States v Powell 761 F.2d 1227 (8th Cir. 1985); United States v Miller (1985, CA3 Pa) 753 F2d 19 (3<sup>d</sup> Cir. 1985). Under the present law, however, a court must detain a defendant pending appeal of his conviction unless the defendant shows that the appeal raises a substantial question of law or fact likely to result in reversal or an order for a new trial. The presumption that the conviction is correct, implicit in the Bail Reform Act of 1984 and particularly in 18 U.S.C.A. § 3143(b)(2), places the burden on the defendant to overcome that presumption.

Defendant continues to obfuscate his good faith defense that he believed his conduct was lawful, which was considered and rejected by the trial jury, with his frivolous legal contention that the Paperwork Reduction Act provides a complete defense to his fraudulent conduct.<sup>1</sup> Contrary to Defendant's assertion that he "is likely to prevail on his PRA claims," (Defendant's Motion for Release at 6), Defendant again will be told in no uncertain terms that the Paperwork Reduction Act does not provide a defense to the crimes with which he was charged: conspiracy to defraud the United States, attempted tax evasion and willful failure to file. However, it is almost equally certain that Defendant will ignore what the appellate court tells him and find yet another reason why he is justified in his criminal tax fraud.

As stated by the Court, the Form 1040 complies with the Paperwork Reduction Act. However, whether or not the Form 1040 complies is irrelevant because Defendant's convictions were for conspiracy to defraud the United States, attempted tax evasion and <sup>1</sup> Defendant asserts that he "has sought a ruling on the merits of his specific Paperwork Reduction Act violations 5 different times from the district court and Tenth Circuit." Defendant's Motion for Release at 4. However, Defendant has been told that the Paperwork Reduction Act is no defense to his willful failure to file tax returns. "[I]t is settled law that 'the requirement to file a tax return is mandated by statute, not by regulation' and 'such explicit statutory requirements are not subject to the PRA.'" Springer v. United States, 447 F.Supp.2d 1235, 1238 (N.D.OK 2006), quoting United States v. Dawes, 951 F.2d 1189, 1191-92 (10th Cir.1991). Defendant's meritless argument has been rejected repeatedly by the Tax Courts, Federal District Courts and Federal Courts of Appeals. See Salberg v. United States, 969 F.2d 379, 384 (7th Cir.1992) ("Statutes are not subject to the PRA and, as the government points out in its brief, every court that has considered the argument that the regulations and the instruction books promulgated by the IRS are within the scope of the PRA has rejected it."); United States v. Patridge, 507 F.3d 1092, 1094 (7th Cir. 2007) ("the obligation to file a tax return stems from 26 U.S.C. §7203, not from any agency's demand. The Paperwork Reduction Act does not repeal §7203"); United States v. Dawes, 951 at 1193 ("Congress enacted the PRA to keep agencies, including the IRS, from deluging the public with needless paperwork. It did not do so to create a loophole in the tax code").

willful failure to file a tax return. Defendant knew he was required to file tax returns.

Indeed, at sentencing he claimed to have advised numerous individuals that they needed to file tax returns. Nevertheless, Defendant willfully failed to file a tax return for any year from 2000 through 2007.<sup>2</sup>

Finally, Defendant's other contentions of legal error with respect to the jury instructions defining income and gift, and with respect to venue, have previously been raised by Defendant, and appropriately considered and rejected by the Court. These matters may be raised with the appellate court, where they will be similarly rejected.

III. DEFENDANT'S DETENTION IS APPROPRIATE

As indicated above, Defendant is appropriately detained under to Section 3143 of the United States Code. Title 18, United States Code Section 3145(c) provides that "[a] person subject to detention pursuant to section 3143(a)(2) or (b)(2), and who meets the conditions of release set forth in section 3143(a)(1) or (b)(1), may be released, under appropriate conditions, by the judicial officer, if it is clearly shown that there are exceptional reasons why such person's detention would not be appropriate. Defendant has not, and cannot, show exceptional reasons why his detention is inappropriate.

IV. CONCLUSION

Contrary to Defendant's assertion, he does not meet the factors necessary to be released on bond pending appeal that are set forth in Title 18, United States Code Section 3143(b). Neither has Defendant clearly shown that there are exceptional reasons why his detention is inappropriate under Title 18 United States Code Section 3145(c). For the foregoing reasons, the United States requests that the Court deny Defendant's Motion for Release.

Respectfully submitted,
